TeenScreen and Psychiatry - Pseudo-Science or Scam?

By: John Carey

Enron, WorldCom, TeenScreen. What do these groups have in common? They have run huge scams on the public in their pursuit of power and the almighty dollar.

TeenScreen is based on the flawed pseudo-science of psychiatry. The screening program asks young people invasive questions about their feelings, then compares the answers to lists of symptoms from psychiatric "manuals", the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders (DSM IV).

[More:]

The DSM has been thoroughly discredited, even by psychiatrists and psychologists. In an article entitled DSM: Diagnosing for Money and Power, Ofer Zur and Nordmarken, MFT, state that "The DSM is more a political document than a scientific one. Decisions regarding inclusion or exclusion of disorders are made by politicians and not by indisputable scientific data."

Recent media has exposed corruption in those psychiatric researchers who created the DSM IV. USA Today reported in April '06, "A majority of the medical researchers who wrote the "bible" for diagnosing mental illness have undisclosed financial links to pharmaceutical companies." <http://www.usatoday.com/tech/science/2006-04-19-conflicts-exposed>

We have all seen the fraudulent advertisements about chemical imbal causing "mental illness". Drug companies are able to fool many peopl by falsely associating themselves with true medical science. There ar imbalances (known, provable, indisputable) in medicine. An example i imbalance is Diabetes - a lab test shows too much sugar in the perso imbalance is corrected by giving insulin, the exact hormone that is mis science.

What about psychiatry's version? There is NO blood test. There is no Prozac flowing through a normal child's brain. The American Foundation for Suicide Prevention is holding a walk: "Out of the Darkness Overnight" in Chicago August 12-13 and San Francisco August 22-23. It is being heavily promoted in PSA's on the rock station, W. I think they are probably elsewhere. They are using grieving people to indirectly fund themselves. How obscene is that?
