DRUGGED CIVIL OBEDIENCE

Drugs in America – what can one say? American seniors are, no doubt, the highest population on the planet. Most of our elders take so many prescription drugs on a daily basis that God only knows how their bodies and minds are faring.

Foster care and other institutionalized kids are forced prescription addicts. Teenagers entertain themselves, and have for decades, with drugs and alcohol. College students party themselves sick and often to death. Nursing home residents are drugged to lethargy and death on a daily basis, and new and improved drugs are our new, incessant, and lala land television commercials – 24/7.

We have open borders for the benefits and multinational profits of drug cartels and their national sponsors. Teen Screen and the New Freedom Initiative on Mental Health hopes to corral a whole new target population for the pharmaceutical industry, and American women, with their chic therapy sessions and little pink pills are taking anti-depression to whole new levels of cool “zoning.”

What can one say? Between the enforced altered and managed realities of media, politicians, environmentalism, globalism, think tankers, and our

Drugs. The War on Drugs. Hmmm. This is not rocket science, folks. Nor is it entertainment. Drugs are weapons, and they work like a globally enforced charm.

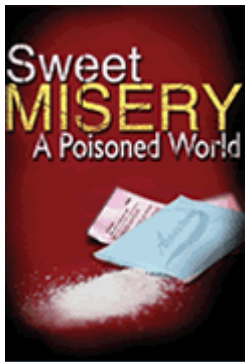

CFR-inspired New American Community, why not throw mass intellectual incapacitation into the mix. Makes for easy nation conquering – don't you think?

What a world, people, what a world. So easy to see and decipher, but not when you're loaded to the gills on "substances." It's actually quite difficult to see clearly – the forest for trees, so to speak - when lala land becomes your reality, and being nice and obedient becomes an automatic chemical reaction.

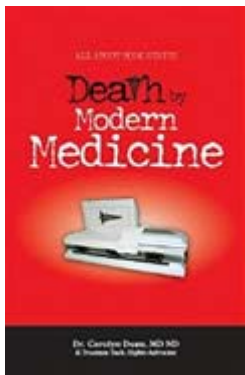

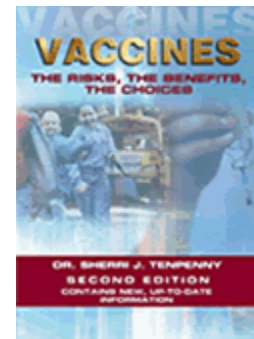

Bloodless nation conquering is a good way to put it – when people sit back and drool while their nation falls to very smart tactical maneuvers, such as mass drugging. On that note, we should add to our altered states the psychotronic warfare technologies that are reported to affect the brain functions of all targeted, and also considered to be a more "humane" method of people control.

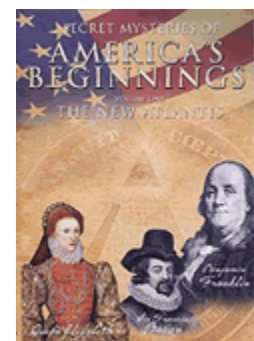

And we should mention the altering of the world's food supply by transnational corporations, who have turned food and water into genetically modified chemical concoctions for on-going human experimentation and profit. And, of course, the manufacturing and on-going, microbiological experimentation with super viruses, genetics, and genetic databasing. It's fair to say that the human subject has become a source of great interest to the world's movers and shakers, and a veritable Petrie dish for the funding and fascination of science as a whole.

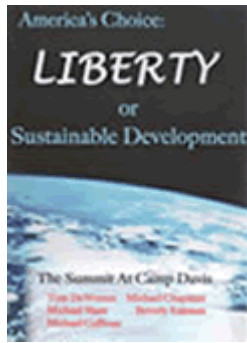

I'm also fascinated by the timing of the mass-drugging era, which coincides so remarkably with climate control technologies and the ending of private property rights, fresh water rights, and gun rights – most remarkable coincidences in my book.

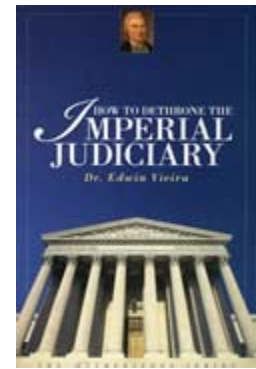

Equally remarkable is the social timing of road removals and the "quit driving a car" movement – as so recently demonstrated by the global Naked Bike Riding Campaign – where people all over the world now ride their bicycles in broad daylight, in the tens of thousands, naked as newborn babes, to draw attention to the "bad automobile driver" push for "green" transportation.

Well, you know, folks, that timing is everything. If in doubt, ask the CFR about "timing." Nation conquering, at its bloodless finest, is taking shape and control all over the world – especially in the United States of America – the once home of the chemically free and the brave.

And as the problem of “the free and the brave” put a chink in the “timing” of all things globally planned, what better way to neutralize the belief in individualism and liberty but to toss it an entertainment, a side-tracker, and a silencer like “drugs.” Make them dark and illegal at first, but ensure their mass availability, and then, over the years, bring their usage to the forefront of public, mainstream, and widespread acceptability – just prior to making them mandatory with programs like the New Freedom Initiative on Mental Health – where every American is now to be “screened” as a potential client for the pharmaceutical industry – the very big and powerful pharmaceutical industry – the same industry that has damaged the world’s children, seniors, and military with their “mandatory” and enforced vaccinations.

In fact, “mandatory” has become an interesting concept where health care is concerned. The Emergency State Health Powers Act comes to mind, as does the “obesity” issue that the United Nations is now working toward solving...the United Nations.

Drugs. The War on Drugs. Hmmm. This is not rocket science, folks. Nor is it entertainment. Drugs are weapons, and they work like a globally enforced charm. And on that note, let us not forget the use of “substances” in other arenas, such as on the battlefields. Agent Orange, depleted uranium, chemical and biological weapons – these are also manufactured substances, made specifically for the purpose of human illness and neutralization. Let us not forget the human experimentation upon people of color in the United States. Let us not forget that incarcerated populations are also mass victims of experimentation and “mandatory” drugs.

With all this in mind, consider well all the dots that connect to the bloodless conquering ability of the beast. It is still, and in fact, a beast. Control is its mission - implementation of its dictatorship the goal. And ultimately, a global/grand scale population reduction, as per the results of the globally collected DNA samples of mankind, and the desires for a certain kind of human population – one that suits the interests and desires of the beast.

And you can evaluate the term “beast” in any way that suits you. If you are Biblically oriented, certain connotations come to mind. If you are not Biblically oriented, “beast” will conjure up other images. Either way, the beast remains the same and achieves its goals and desires nonetheless. But the beast is hard to see, imagine, or concentrate upon when you're high as a satellite.

Think twice about what it means to be a drug addict in America. Check you medicine cabinets, kitchen pantries and cupboards, water faucets, television sets, and air supply for active ingredients and other usage warnings and hazards.

The out-in-the-open conquering of the United States of America has become a ridiculously easy task. Smile away in your comfort zones. Incapable of thinking, you act according to pre-plans. You probably won't notice the complete lack of freedom and rights or your indentured enslavement. Global missions accomplished. Never underestimate the enemy of freedom, which is the enemy of all mankind.

Also, the A.C.E organization has been literally bombarded by requests for information packets. Volunteers are working day and night to get your packets to you, so please be patient with us. We all have full-time jobs, too. We are running about 3 weeks behind, updating our website, and also adding information to our information packets – and all at the same time. The response to A.C.E. has been monumental, and, frankly, we didn't expect the massive numbers of inquiries. Thank God for you people. You give our nation hope. We will have several hundred more packets out this week, and several hundred more by next weekend. Please be patient. Also, encourage family and friends in other parts of the country to contact A.C.E. at contactus@a4ce.org. We'll get information packets to them, too.
